TEAM RECOVERED

The Thief Arrested in Connecticut.

ROANOKE TIMES BUREAU, HOTEL LUCERNE, SALEM, VA. E. E. Walters, hired a team from J B. Powell on the 16th of July, ostensibly to drive his wife and family about the city, but the team never returned neither did any of the Walters.'

Mr. Powell instituted a search and traced Walters through Buchanan, Lexington, Staunton and Harrisonburg to Hagerstown, Md., where he found Mrs. Walters and her children. He attached her baggage and when asked for what sum he would release it, Powell said $100. Mrs. Walters telegraphed to Walters for the amount to New Haven, Conn., and his whereabouts being then ascertained he was arrested by the chief of police at New Haven, where he is now held.

Walters lived in Roanoke until a few months ago. He was first in the lighting rod business and drove last winter for the Magic City Transfer Company. He sold Mr. Powell three weeks ago the same team he made off with to Maryland. traced Walters through Buchanan, Lex-

It turns out that Mrs. Walters is not Mrs. Walters. She is Mrs. Kale, it is authoritatively stated. Her husband, Mr. Kale, kept a butcher's stall in Petersburg about seven years ago, and about three years ago he died Mrs. Kale then clerked at the racket store of McGuire on Church street, Norfolk, until a year and a half ago, when she moved to Roanoke and established a boarding house near the city cemetery. Walters went to board with her and passed off as her cousin.

Two weeks ago they went to Radford and opened another boarding house there, but skipped to Salem when a warrant was issued at Radford charging them with keeping a house of ill fame and solling liquor without a license. At Salem they went to board at Mrs. Marks', who, finding out their character, promptly dismissed them on the day they left with Mr. Powell's team. Mrs. Kale has a son named Arthur, 14 years old, and a daughter, Blanche, 16 years of ago.

Mr. Powell's team had been left at

Mr. Powell's team had been left at Captain Bamford's livery stable in Hagerstown, where he recovered it Monday, after paying the officers of that city the $25 reward he offered.

Commonwealth's Attorney W. W. Ballard will turn the case of Walters over to the special grand jury to be summoned Friday to consider the Watkins murder case, and if Walters is indicted will send an officer for him armed with a requisition from the Governor of Virgini upon the Governor of Connecticut. gini upon the Governor of Connecticut.

'Squire J.H. A special grand jury will be summoned Friday to take into consideration the evidence in the case, and Watkins will doubtless be indicted for the murder of his wife, Lucy Watkins.

WHO SETS THE FASHIONS.

The Prince of Wales Credited with Super-vising the Tollets of His Spouse.

Although it would be considered as rank treason in England to question in the slightest degree the reputation for good taste, chie and elegance in dress enjoyed by the Princess of Wales, yet, says an exchange, the fact remains that it is altogether and entirely undescreed. The merit of fulling the fashion for the The merit of telling the fashion for the fair sex in Great Britain belongs not, as is generally supposed, to her, but to her husband, the prince. The latter's taste, formed as it has been by his intercourse with the Comtess de Pourtales, the Marquise de Galliffet, the Marquise de Castellane and others of the most famous grande, mondaines at Paris is Castellane and others of the most famous grande mondaines at Paris, is above reproach. It is he, who amid his other multifarious occupations, finds time to personally supervise every detail of the princess' toilets, and no innovation of dress or colifure is over inaugurated by her royal highness which has not previously been submitted to the approval and received the sanction of the prince. The only occasion when she was permitted to follow her own ideas with regard to dress was while her husband was in India, and the result was simply appalling, for by birth sult was simply appalling, for by birth and education she is thoroughly Ger-man and her personal taste with regard to dress is likewise German. Until she married she was entirely ignorant of all the delicate elegance of the "tollette intime" of a Parisienne. For a time she had her own way with regard to the dress of her three daughters, and in consequence, although they are nice and pretty girls, they appeared the most dowdy and inelegant young ladies in the whole of the United Kingdom. It has only been since the prince was in-duced to interfere in their behalf that they have been dressed with any de-gree of chic. The most recent instance, however, of the princess' somewhat commonplace, and what would be decommonplace, and what would be de-scribed in London as Bloomsbury tastes, is her newly developed craze for pho-tographing on china. The court jour-nals gravely announced that she had completed an entire tea service adorned with the portraits of her family. One can imagine therefore, the familiars of can imagine, therefore, the feelings of the prince when gazing on his wife's breakfast table decked with this pho-tograph-stained porcelain, when he sees a deep golden stream of tea run-ning down the check of his revered mother's face on the teapot while help-ing himself to milk from a milk jug adorned with the features of his eldest son, and subsequently rinsing his cup in a slop-basin decorated with a group of his family taken in front of the 'ibrary window at Sandringham.

MANUFACTURING GLOBES.

Description of How Geographical Spheres Are Constructed.

The first process is to cover the model with a thick layer of pasteboard in a moist state. When it is dry a sharp knife is passed around it so as to separand it spassed around it so as to separate the pasteboard coat into two hemispherical shells, which are then taken off the model and united at the cut edges with glue. The hollow sphere thus formed is the skeleton of the globe that is to be that is to be.

The next thing is to cover it with a coating of white enamel about one-eighth of an inch in thickness. When this is done the ball is turned into perfect roundness with a machine. The iron rod running through the center of the original model and projecting at both ends through the surface has left holes in the new globe which serve for the north and south poles, and through these a metal axis is run to represent the axis of the earth.

Then the surface is marked off with pencil lines into mathematical segments, corresponding precisely in shape with the sections of map that are to be with the sections of map that are to be pasted on, continues the Boston Transcript. These map sections are made from copper plates in just the sizes and shapes required to fit the globe they are made for, one set, of course, covering the entire surface of a sphere. They are printed, many of them, like dress patterns, on sheets of the finest linen paper, and are cut out carefully with a sharp-pointed knife.

Finally the whole is overlaid with a brilliant white varnish, which is of almost metallie hardness, and it will wear indefi-nitely without scratching and without losing its brightness.

"WHO BREAKS PAYS."

How an Artist Was Led Into a Trap by His Pupils.

In Paris there lives an eminent painter who is economical and sententious, says an exchange. The other day one of the students broke a pane of glass in the studio window and replaced it temporarily by pasting a sheet of paper over the aperture.

When the painter came down next morning he thrust his cane through the makeshift with the remark: "He that breaks pays." None of the class, however, took the hint, and the next morning another sheet of paper was nexted. ing another sheet of paper was pasted across the window. It met the same fate. And so on the next day, and so on the fourth.

On the fifth day, when the artist on the fifth day, when the artist came down, there was the paper as before. Fire flashed from his eyes, and roaring: "He that breaks, pays!" he drove his cane through the paper—and through the pane of glass behind it that had been put in by the students, and then carefully pasted over with a sheet of paper. of paper.

People who go to Chili must not make the mistake of supposing that the far-away land is a good place to wear out old clothes in, for there is no city where the latest fashions prevail to greater extent. Many of the private residences are perfect palaces, furnished in magnificent style. Though Chili has no native marble there are few cities in the world where so much of that beautiful material enters into the construction of the houses as in Santiago.

STATUE OF COLUMBUS.

The Gift of the Italian Residents of the Country.

It Will Be Presented to the City of New York — Galtano Russo's Design Chosen and Its Execution Already Begun.

New York is going to have a statue of Christopher Columbus that, accord-ing to the New York Sun, will do credit to the town and to the Italian residents of the country who are going to give it to us. The movement to erect the but the movement to erect the statue was started in 1889 by Charles Barsotti, editor and proprietor of Il Progresso Italio-Americano, and he has devoted himself to it ever since with the result that he now has seven thousand dollars with which to begin the work.

Competition for the work was opened in Italy under the auspices of Signor Crispi (then premier) and the Italian government. A jury including such eminent artists and sculptors as Monteverdi, Farrari, Salvini, Sacconi, Calderini and Maccari, was chosen to judge the merits of the designs presented. They have selected Gaitano Russo's design, and be is now at work on the They have selected Gaitano Russo's design, and he is now at work on the statue. The statue will be of marble, including the pedestal. The base will be about 36 feet square. At the foot of the circular marble shaft will be four figures—one representing a Spaniard, another an American, another an Italian and the fourth a winged genic.
The pedestal and all will be made in Italy, and will probably be sent from there the early part of next year. The sculptor will accompany the statue, to superintend the work of creeting it. The statue will be ready for unveiling on Oct. 12 next year. Where it is to stand has not yet been determined. An effort is being made to secure the triangle at the Fifth avenue and Fifty-ninth street entrance of Central Park. The plot is used for nothing near and The plot is used for nothing now, and such a statue as this would be an ornament to it.

The total cost of the statue and The total cost of the statue and pedestal will probably be about $55,000. If the sculptor received pay for his work it would be $100,000 more. He is doing the work free. The money needed to complete the statue and put it in place will be contributed by American Italians. A committee of 1,000 Italian citizens of New York have volunteered to raise $10 each, and more 1.000 Italian citizens of New York have volunteered to raise $10 each, and more than 000 have already given the money. This is in addition to the $7,000 previously raised. Subscriptions have come in from all over the United States, and Mr. Barsotti said recently that he had received a subscription of $37 from an American Italian in Venezuela. Monkeys as Coin-Testers.

It is said that the great ape of Siam is in great request among the Siamese merchants as cashiers in their counting houses. Vast quantities of base coins are known to be in circulation in Siam, from that scorched-up little oriental kingdom, no living human can discriminate between the good and bad coinage with as much securacy as these apes. These monkey cushiers possess the faculty of distinguishing the rude Slamese counterfeits in such an extraordinary degree that no trained banker can compete with them in their unique avocation. In plying his trade the ape cashier meditatively puts each coin presented to him in his mouth and tests it with grave deliberation. From two to five seconds is liberation. From two to five seconds is all the time this intelligent animal requires in making up his decision. If the coin is all right it is carefully deposited in the preserve acceptable if here the coin is all right it is carefully de-posited in the proper receptacle; if base it is thrown violently to the floor, while the coin tester makes known, his dis-pleasure at being presented with the counterfeit by giving vent to much angry chattering.

Has the Making of a Martinet. The ten-year-old crown prince of Germany appears to be in a fair way of be-coming an insufferable little prig. A few days ago, when returning with his brothers from a drive, the palace guard, as usual, turned out on the approach of the imperial children. As the carriage had driven up rather rapidly the men were forced to run as fast as they could to assume their places in the ranks, and one unfortunate fellow, in his haste, forgot his gun. This was immediately noticed by the crown prince, who, as soon as ever the carriage had stopped, instead of entering the palace, hurried off with his brothers to the officer in command of the guard for the purpose of lodging a complaint against the soldier who had appeared without his rifle. The result was that the soldier was sentenced to four days' arrest and to a further term of fatigue duty for his remissioness, while the Pervin pages of the service remissness, while the Berlin papers are filled with laudatory notices of the mili-tary feeling and precision of the future emperor of Germany.
